WELCOME TO HERMLE. We build beautiful clocks.

In 1977, Hermle Black Forest Clocks located in the scenic foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains manufactured and shipped its first Hermle mechanical movement on US soil. It was the beginning of the modern era of the clock industry. Hermle supplied many of the existing clock case goods manufacturers with our sought after German quality mechanisms.

Many of our customers received the benefit of our expertise in assembly of their case goods. Beginning in the early 1980's, we were asked to assemble our movements into our customer's cases, which then became a staple of our production line.

In 2002, we opened our doors to the clock retail industry with Hermle branded clocks assembled in our factory in Amherst, VA and a selection of German made Hermle clocks. After 6 expansions to our factory, we continue our growth as the world's leader in clock mechanisms and as an alternative clock source to the retailers of North America.

Our innovations in design, form and function keep us ahead of the curve and our meticulous quality improvements have made Hermle North America the preferred clock source in our industry.

Hermle Black Forest Clocks was rebranded as Hermle North America in January 2011 to signify the next step into the future. Hermle North America is a one-stop shop for all genuine Hermle products, including the largest Hermle and Urgos movement selection available to the trade in the world. Our clock movements, clock accessories, clock parts and clocks are distributed throughout North America to a vast dealer network. More recently, in our continuous efforts to develop the Hermle North America program we have added a wood manufacturing facility here in the heart of Virginia. We are proud to generate new local manufacturing jobs from a rich historical region involved in the wood trade. This is an exciting time for us to serve our customers with cases manufactured and built in Virginia.

A tall, black Hermle floor clock stands on the left side of the image. It features a round white clock face with black Roman numerals and hands. Below the face is a pendulum with two cylindrical weights and a large circular bob. The clock is positioned next to a white wall with three large circular openings. The top opening shows a view of a modern building with a curved balcony. The middle opening shows a view of a modern interior with a curved balcony, a potted plant, and two modern bar stools. The bottom opening shows a view of a modern interior with a curved balcony and two modern bar stools. The Hermle logo is in the top right corner.

THE TELLURIUM / ASTROLABIUM

The expression TELLURIUM originates from the Latin Word for the earth, TELLUS, and denominates three-dimensional astronomic models which illustrate the rotation of the earth around the sun.

Kopernikus' groundbreaking astronomic discoveries in the early 16th century made the cosmic motions accessible to human imagination. One of the first telluriums in history was built by the Huguenot J.T. Desaguliers which was used as a means of illustration during his popular astronomic lectures in England. The oldest existing telluriums were devised by Dutch Willem Janszoon Blaeu (1571-1638).

At the beginning, the main purpose of the tellurium was to show the earth's inclination relative to the sun. Later on, the moon was added to demonstrate the single moon phases and the phenomena of lunar and solar eclipses. Today Blaeu's tellurium can be admired at the Nautical Museum of Amsterdam.

Around the same time, a watchmaker called Siebenhaar from Schleswig (Northern Germany) developed his own tellurium, which was probably finished in the year 1651 and is nowadays exhibited at Frederiksborg Castle in the town of Hillerød in Denmark. While the first telluriums were mainly built to demonstrate the planets' motions relative to each other, later models are aiming more at the fairly exact mechanical approximation of the planets relative periods of revolution around each other by means of precise transmissions.

MOVEMENT DESCRIPTION: W 0352-070

8 day, spring wound, movement with Westminster chime on 4 polished bells. Separate second feature. 11 Swiss jewel deadbeat escapement, polished brass disc has milled zodiac signs and rosettes, in addition to the months and days of the year. The Tellurium has reproductions of the sun, earth and moon, incorporating the day/month indicator.

With this masterpiece Franz Hermle & Sohn created a world novelty, the first ever industrially manufactured mechanical tellurium. The HERMLE Tellurium is one of the highlights of the HERMLE Collection, a timepiece for connoisseurs who admire beauty and aesthetics of the fine art of mechanical clockmaking.

The transparency of the case with its curved, beveled glass panel and its stunning handmade glass dome allows a fascinating look at the HERMLE four-bell Westminster chime movement 352 with highly polished plates and the tellurium at the centre of the dome.

The HERMLE Tellurium 22805 offers a solid wood piano finish base, silver-plated dial with a milled rhombus pattern, blue steel hands and a heavy polished brass disc with milled zodiac signs and delicate filigree rosettes.

The Tellurium clock reproduces the annual orbit of the earth around the sun, with the earth rotating around its own axis once in twenty-four hours. The moon, in turn, revolves around the earth in 29.5 days completing a full rotation around its axis. This allows the reproduction of the different moon phases as they are visible from earth. In the course of one year, the earth passes all twelve zodiac signs, months and individual days which are indicated on the brass disc.

While the passing of time is exactly reproduced, this is not possible with regard to the geometric dimensions of the planets and the distances. For instance, if the earth has a diameter of 30 mm, real size: 12.757 km, the moon diameter, in proportion, would have to be 8.17 mm, real size: 3.476 km, and its distance from the earth 903 mm, real distance: 384.000 km*. In proportion to the sizes, the sun would reach the size of 3.292 m, real size: 1.4 million km, and the distance to the earth would amount to 351.57 m, real distance: 149.5 million km.
